Mission Hills, San Diego, CA

Love at first sight begins before you even step inside. Tucked just blocks from the vibrant shops and restaurants of Mission Hills, this Mission Revival-style home greets you with sun-warmed stucco walls, graceful archways, and a wrought-iron elegance that speaks to old Spanish California — outdoor spaces that instantly feel like home, steeped in character you simply can't recreate. Step through the door and the story shifts into something more contemporary. Rich ceilings and terracotta-inspired details set the stage, while the kitchen brings a jolt of modern luxury — a sleek prep island opening effortlessly into the living area. Picture morning coffee here, bathed in serene treetop views, or an evening gathering with friends spilling easily from countertop to couch. It's old-world soul with a designer's touch. Down the hall, the home's three bedrooms offer restful, light-filled retreats, while the two fully remodeled bathrooms elevate daily routines into something closer to ritual — deep soaking tubs, decorative tiled showers, and finishes that feel plucked from a boutique hotel. And beneath the Spanish tile and timeless charm sits a very modern advantage: solar, owned outright and paid in full, powering this storybook home well into its next chapter.
